FEEDBACK :

This programme gave us good awareness about basic of Japanese. The speaker explained about the Japanese writing system includes three scripts: kanji, hiragana, and katakana. Kanji are characters adopted from Chinese characters and are used for words of Chinese origin and for native Japanese words that have no hiragana equivalent. This program is being aware of Japanese is a subject-object-verb language, which means that the subject of the sentence usually comes before the object and the verb comes at the end. Nouns in Japanese do not have gender, and there are no articles or plurals. Instead, particles are used to indicate the role of a word in a sentence. Learning Japanese can be challenging, but with practice and dedication, it is possible to become proficient in the language. FEEDBACK:

This programme gave us good awareness about Spoken English. The speaker explained about the knowledge of proper grammar and vocabulary usage, as well as an understanding of different accents, dialects, and intonations. This program is Being aware of spoken English also involves knowing the appropriate context and situation for certain words and phrases. For example, using formal language in a professional setting, or informal language with friends. The speaker shared his knowledge of Improving one's spoken English awareness can be achieved through practice and exposure to the language. This can be done by listening to native English speakers, engaging in conversation with others, or taking formal classes or lessons. Developing spoken English awareness can greatly enhance one's ability to communicate with others in English, whether it be for personal or professional reasons.
